

Finding the information you need in BiONiC

This document provides a few annotated screenshots to help you find and interpret some crucial information in BiONiC: enrollment limits, prerequisites, and requirements.

If you have forgotten how to do basic searches in BiONiC, please start with the information on the Registrar's website.

Since many times students are interested in particular departments and begin by searching for all the courses being offered in a particular department, we'll start there. Here's what a student would see if they searched for Anthropology. To learn more about a particular course, click on the section number (here a purple oval).

Description
An introduction to the place of humans in nature, evolutionary theory, living primates, the fossil record for human evolution, human evolution and the origin of man, and the archaeological investigation of culture change from the Old Stone Age to the present.

The blue oval in Enrollment Information tells you what college-wide requirements the course will fulfill. It will also list interdisciplinary minors and majors that the course is officially a part of.

The green oval in Class Notes tells you what the specific enrollment cap is – the actual course limit, in this case 34. 15 of those slots are held for entering first years, who will register later this summer. Class Notes also tells you who gets priority. If there is no enrollment cap listed, then the course should be unlimited.

The red X in Class Availability shows that BiONIC is currently set to allow up to 150 students to preregister. This allows our preregistration period to accommodate all qualified students. It does not mean that 150 students will be allowed to take the class; the enrollment cap is still 34. If the number of students who preregister exceeds the enrollment cap, that's when a lottery is done. This year, lotteries will be done in early July and you will be notified of your results by email then.

Description tells you more about the class, including prerequisites. This course has none, since it is a 100-level. But here is a qui Haverford may put some of this info in slightly different sections. Specifically, the enrollment cap will usually be part of Description rather than in Notes.
